Anyone have any ideas? A: "Invalid link" is a common error message when the remote site is offline. You should be able to try again if it's still down. COPD: current ideas and new perspectives. The decline in lung function in chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD) is more marked than in most other chronic conditions in terms of both degree and rate. Although smoking is the only well established risk factor, there is evidence that a number of other exposures may also influence the development and progression of COPD. Smoking cessation can ameliorate the decline in lung function, but the disease often follows a fairly predictable course with a stable long-term decline in lung function. There are some older people in whom COPD will develop over the next decades, but young smokers who develop COPD can usually be identified on the basis of their age and smoking history. There is a need for more accurate definition of the cohort of patients with COPD to enable them to be defined and followed longitudinally. In the wake of the Democratic Party's abject failure on gun control (I'll say it again: the Democratic Party's failure on gun control), a number of very nasty things are being said about Democrats. It is entirely possible that these things will be true. But if they are true, they are true only because of Democrats' failures, and only because of Democrats' actions. I'm a Democrat. I've voted for Democrats more than most people I know. I grew up loving them, still do, but they've let me down. You should know this: I'm a Democrat because I believe in them. That was never more true than on this issue. Gun control is the one issue, the only issue, in which Democrats have made a true and actual difference in Americans' lives. They didn't pass it because there was a Republican conspiracy to stop them. They didn't try and fail because the president is a "clown" — or any other damn thing someone has accused Obama of, lately. And I think we have a responsibility to be honest with ourselves. The NRA and the gun lobby are bad people. They're not the only bad people. The NRA is the single worst, most corrupt, most dangerous and extreme element in American
